Elements of protection

Historical reference: Eurasian Economic Community (EurAsEC) is an international organization that ensures multilateral economic cooperation among its member states. The Treaty on the establishment of EurAsEC was signed on October 10, 2000 by the leaders of Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russia and Tajikistan. Since 2002 observers in the EurAsEC are Moldova and Ukraine, and from 2003 - Armenia.

EurAsEC pays attention to numerous interstate programs, one of the first of which is "Innovative biotechnologies". The program is aimed at a radical modernization of the production of competitive products, and provides for the development and introduction of new biotechnology, biologics and diagnostic test systems for agriculture, industry, medicine and environmental protection.
